Synopsis:

Near death, Mary reveals to her daughter-in-law the unfathomable act she committed some fifty years ago. The man she raised, Betty's husband, is not actually her child. Mary takes Bettie on a journey that begins with a fairy tale childhood. Familial abuse leads her to steal a young boy; unimaginable acts become understandable as her past reveals many hidden truths. On her deathbed, Mary owns her faults and seeks forgiveness for failing others.

I have been given the tea(information)!

It took me on a journey of loss, contentment, anger, acceptance, fear, trust, love and forgiveness. It was like a thrill ride at Six Flags. Each turn of the page left me wanting more, I need to know more! A family foundation built on secrets and lies turned into sincere apologies and forgiveness. I just know there's going to be more. Will there be peace for a stolen baby? I need to know what Mrs. Simpson wrote to the doctor. Does Beatrice ever find out the truth?
